City Entrance Bad Windsheim / 2012

Project	JSW
Client	City of Bad Windsheim
Status	Commission
Site	5.663 m ²
Cooperation	Dr. Anette Gangler / URP, Stuttgart

In 2011 the Frankenbrunnen Foundation organized a contest for pupils on the occasion of the 50 years anniversary of the spa town Bad Windsheim. The ideas originated served as a starting point for the redesign of the area between the train station and the historic centre. Water as a major topic should be introduced to pedestrians and visitors.

A new paving connects the train station with the Spitalwall, points the direction and makes it easy to non-residents to find the way to the historic centre. All crossings are barrier-free. Statues welcome passengers, stone benches and illuminated sofas invite them to linger on the square. A new fountain characterized by the city arms is placed at the street Oberntiefer Straße. A new playground at the intersection of Johanniterstraße and Spitalwall is designed with waterplays and a wooden tower. In combination with a footprint in the pavement of the former Johannitertor, a fortification tower, it illustrates the entrance to the historic centre. A guidance system with steles provides information and orientation in the urban fabric.
